DO JET PLANES WORRY ANIMALS?

What kind of noise annoys an animal? Most people don't know much about the subject, but many farmers have been wondering whether jet aircraft noise is upsetting their livestock — enough that is, to lower production of eggs, milk or meat.

About a year ago the Air Force asked the U. S. Department of Agriculture to look into the matter. Airplanes are likely to be around for while, and so will farm animals. And everyone seems to be in favor of harmony between the two.

Pigs were chosen by the USDA for the study because they grow rapidly and shorter life cycles than larger animals. Results are expected to show how much noise livestock can stand without ill effects.

Work so far shows that animals display no outward symptoms and undergo no anatomical changes when exposed to aircraft noises. Any effects on production will take longer to establish.

Test animals are being exposed to the sound of both jet and conventional piston - type aircraft through recordings of the actual sound. These are piped into the test pens between 6 A. M. and 6 P. M. at irregular intervals ranging from only a few seconds to 10 or 15 minutes.

SHOT PROVES LUCKY

Austin, Minn.- Being accidentally shot in the back while hunting probably saved 16-year-old Bryan Boettcher's life. Doctors treating the youth after he had been wounded discovered he had a collapsed lung, a condition caused by a rare lung disease. If the ailment had not been found when it was, it likely would have proved fatal.

Another important topic to be discussed is that of selection and placement of high school students for the DE and DO programs for the school year 1957-58. MISUSES HOSPITALITY

Columbus, O.- A young man entered 70-year-old Charles Hatum's grocery store and complained of wet, cold feet. Hatum invited him to dry his shoes on a heater behind the counter. The youth did, then pulled a pistol, emptied the cash register of about $200 and ran.

Stock Disease Appears In Co.

LEPTOSPIROSIS ATTACKS CATTLE IN COUNTY

Leptospirosis, a relatively new animal disease has been positively identified in two herds in the county, and is thought to be another. First herd, when "lepto" was identified, has had four mild cases. The second herd had a severe infestation. Calves have aborted over a period of six months.

This disease wil affect cattle, hogs, horses, dogs, sheep and is found in most rodents. An infected animal sheds the organism through its urine. Thus rats while feeding in grain sheds may shed the organism and therefore infect the herd.

Diagnosis to the layman is not clear cut but appears as another problem. Loss of appetite,, milk perduction drops sharply, discoloration of the urine with blood may vary from a mild pink to deep red or almost black. Litter may show symptom of mastitis, flaceid or hardened, but not inflamed. Milk becomes yellowish and like colostrum, and may be tinged with blood. Abortion may occur at any stage, but usually in the last one-third. Animals may show one or many of these symptoms dependent on the degree of infection.

Blood test will determine its presence in the herd. Vaccination is possible, but only good for short periods of time.

Another important topic to be discussed is that of selection and placement of high school students for the DE and DO programs for the school year 1957-58. Appomattox County yesterday received delivery of its bright new fire engine, which had been ordered last October 29. The county Board of Supervisors has contracted with O. N. Mathews to put an addition to the present Town of Appomattox fire house, to take care of the county engine. The town has leased the needed land for this addition to the county. The addition will cost $942. Work is scheduled to begin Monday.

The new fire engine was purchased from the Howe Fire Apparatus Company, of Anderson, Indiana. A new chassis was purchased at a cost of $2,859.74, and the Howe Company built the fire engine on this chassis for a cost of $7,950.

Factory representative accompanied the engine to Appomattox, and the equipment was put through checking tests yesterday afternoon.

It is understood that the Appomattox Volunteer Fire Company will enlarge its membership so as to have enough personnel to man both engines in event of a simultaneous fire in the town and in the county. The new engine will carry 500 gallons of water, and the next move may be to secure a truck capable of carrying a separate load of water if needed.

The need for rural fire protection in the county has long been felt, and acquisition of this new equipment will be hailed as a very progressive step for the county, and a major step toward possible lowering of fire insurance rates, especially within the vicinity of the town.

The county has also made a contribution to the Pamplin fire company, for having their services available in that portion of the county.

Pending the building of an addition to the town fire house, the town engine has been lodged in the firemen's room, half of the existing fire house, and the new county engine housed in the space formerly used for the town engine.

Observer Corps Had Practice Alert

The local Ground Observer Corps participated in "Operation Manassas," a local training exercise conducted by the Richmond Filter Center on Sunday, Feb. 17.

Eleven members participated in the exercise and three names were added to the list of active members. They were Ira E. Wilkins, Bill Allen Burke, and Frank Taylor Mabley. Also it is noted that Bill Caldwell logged up enough hours to receive a 100-hour certificate. Several members received Wings for 36 hours of time..

In Sunday's exercise, instructions were to report two types of aircraft formations. The first was all multi-motored and multijet aircraft in formations of three or more below five thousand feet. The second was to report all types of aircraft in masses of nine or more above five thousand feet.

As this type of flight is scarce in this area, no reports were made. However, Mike Hotel 12 Black was on the job from 9:00 A. M. until 5:00 P. M. This time was used to train several members who had not become entirely familiar with the system.
